

ABSTRACT

5 Isolated synthetic modified amino acids and peptides, which inhibit of the production of virulence factors in bacteria, particularly Staphylococcus, are described. The amino acids and peptides can be used in a method for treatment or prevention of Staphylococcal infections or can be integrated into a medical device to inhibit the development of infection associated with the use of such devices.